Moon Mountain Sanctuary sculpture park celebrates emerging local talent Finn Cossar with the installation of his latest work.

Wednesday, 24 May 2023

Moon Mountain Sanctuary in Eumundi has already established itself as a leading light on the large scale sculpture scene in Australia, with an enviable private collection from some renowned artists having their works already on display across the magnificent Sunshine Coast property overlooked by Mount Cooroy.

Owners of Moon Mountain Sanctuary, Lynn and Ron Scott today proudly hosted an installation event to embrace the talents of young local Sunshine Coast sculptor Finn Cossar. Finn's latest inspiring and thought-provoking work which was showcased today is by far his largest scale creation to date and Lynn and Ron hope it will only further assist Finn in being recognized as the extraordinary artistic talent he is.

"We were delighted to have shared Finn's latest work now on display at Moon Mountain Sanctuary with local dignitaries including Sunshine Coast Councillors Maria Suarez, Joe Natoli and Peter Cox, along with luminaries from across the Australian sculpture and artistic community," said Lynn and Ron Scott.

"As much as we feel so privileged and get immense personal pleasure from being surrounded by so many wonderful sculptures and pieces from such talented artists every day, we also want to ensure we are helping develop and share the inspired visions from talented people such as Finn Cossar on a far broader scale, when they so rightly deserve their place in the sun on the local and national stage of sculptors and artists."

The event also saw the coming together of a number of other local Sunshine Coast patrons of the arts and local business people and professionals, who all share the passion that Lynn and Ron Scott do, to promote and encourage talented local artists in their craft and careers.

"With a background spanning decades in small business and industry, we've always tried to bring together like minded individuals to collaborate and work together for the common good and advancement of all involved. We seek now to use that experience and those skills to help and for the growth and recognition of amazing artisans and crafts people from across the Sunshine Coast region and Australia," said Mr. Scott.
